

Part-time Marketing Manager (Maternity cover)

We are on the lookout for an organized marketing manager with a sharp pen and a keen interest in telling the blue industry about our sustainable design philosophy and how we design for the sea for customers all over the world.

You will be communicating all the exciting stories from our team of interior designers, naval architects, and engineers and on topics such as cruise, ferries, offshore, alternative fuels, virtual reality, and thought leadership in general. Experience in ships or ship design is probably a long shot, but not to worry – we will assist you in getting up to speed on the maritime lingo. Most important is your personal drive and your interest in finding and telling our stories and handling a wide variety of B2B marketing tasks hands on.

You

- are looking to take on new, exciting challenges in a niche field within ship design and B2B marketing,
- you are self-driven, a strong networker, and work hands on with all the various marketing disciplines (LinkedIn/websites, press releases, copywriting/proofreading, exhibitions/logistics, presentations, video etc.),
- thrive in a working environment characterised by trust based responsibility, teamwork, and co-creation with talented colleagues – often under tight deadlines,
- communicate with impact both externally and internally and know how to tailor your communication to the story and platform in play.

We offer

- A competitive salary and benefits package including health insurance
- An inclusive and supportive workplace culture, with a relaxed and approachable atmosphere where there is also time for fuzzball and a Friday beer. An active social club with many yearly events, including concerts, gocarting and much more.
- A transparent, flat organisational structure that encourages collaboration and open dialogue.
- The opportunity to contribute to technically challenging, high-profile projects within a professional and collaborative environment.
